School official says Farr is 'unwilling' to stop voter fraud

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CONGRESSMAN SAM Farr was pointedly criticized this week by the superintendent of the Chualar school district for Farr's "unwillingness to do something about voter fraud."

Marco Sigala, who has headed the school system in the small Salinas Valley town for five years, said that illegal voter registrations have tainted elections for the school board in Chualar.

A member of the Chualar board, Pedro Flores, resigned Jan. 14 after pleading no contest to misdemeanor voter fraud. He is to be sentenced Feb. 11 for "registering numerous people to vote at his home who were not entitled to vote in Chualar," according to District Attorney Dean Flippo.

Sigala told The Pine Cone that Flores' case is just the "tip of the iceberg," and that he knows of two other people — including another candidate for the school board in Chualar — who were "quite flagrant in their abuse" of the electoral system.

In a letter to Farr last November, Sigala blamed the federal government for enacting laws which make it "easy for the 'criminally minded' to register to vote more than once," and he said Farr should introduce "stringent legislation . . . to correct inadequacies" in the voting system.

Farr responded to Sigala's complaints

PUBLIC HEARING SCHEDULED FEB. 2

Council opens can of roundworms

By KIRSTIE WILDE

A SCIENTIFIC study of the raccoon population in Carmel has been delayed, at least until the city council holds a public hearing Tuesday.

Mayor Ken White told The Pine Cone this week that a last-minute agenda item to "receive a report on the status and proposed scientific study of raccoons, and to provide policy direction" has been added to the next council meeting, which is scheduled to begin at 3:30 p.m. Feb. 2 at Carmel City Hall. It is the last item on the agenda.

Peninsula-wide concern about an overpopulation of raccoons and the diseases they carry was sparked last fall when a 12-month-old Pacific Grove boy suffered severe brain damage and eyesight loss after ingesting Baylisascaris procyonis parasites, also known as raccoon roundworms. There are 10 documented cases where the parasites have either killed or put human victims in a "permanent vegetative state," according to Kevin Kazacos, D.V.M. and Ph.D. of Purdue University, the most prominent expert on raccoon roundworm infection. Kazacos said there are also nearly 100 cases of blindness or vision loss caused by the parasites.

Wildlife biologists, animal control officers and scientists from San José State University have been trying to deal with the raccoon situation in Pacific Grove since October. Their efforts to educate residents about how to exclude raccoons from their homes and yards have been applauded, but their willing-

NOTE TO HISTORIANS

THIS WEEK the Pine Cone corrects a mistake that has been carried on the pages of this newspaper since 1992.

At the beginning of that year we failed to roll forward the volume number, leaving both 1991 and 1992 labeled as Volume 77.

Thus, the volume number every year since has been off by one. Since the paper was founded in 1915, this year should be volume 85 and — as of this issue — it is.

Persistance paid off for Carmel policeman Joe Avila, when he chased a wanted felon through Carmel streets Jan. 23.

Felon chased down by Carmel police

By TAMARA GRIPPI

WHAT BEGAN as a routine police stop on Jan. 23 turned into a chase through the streets and alleys of Carmel, when a drug suspect fled from police — jumping over walls and running through parking lots even after being hit with pepper spray. Finally, two Carmel officers tackled Kenneth Langworthy, 46, of Big Sur, and arrested him.

Officers found a methamphetamine rock in a plastic bag that Langworthy had been carrying and a loaded semi-automatic handgun on the floor of his car, according to the police report.

Police soon learned why Langworthy was in such a hurry to get away: he was wanted on two "no bail" warrants from Santa Cruz and Monterey counties and had already been convicted of four felonies, according to Carmel Police Lt. Bill Uretsky.

After his arrest Jan. 23, Langworthy was charged with transportation of a controlled substance with an "enhancement" of carrying a firearm, possessing a controlled substance, possessing a firearm while in possession of a controlled substance, carrying a firearm with a prior conviction and being a felon in possession of a firearm, according to Terry Spitz of the Monterey County District Attorney's office. In addition, Langworthy has been charged with the misdemeanor of resisting arrest.

It started with a cracked windshield

Carmel Police Officer Joe Avila first spotted a cracked windshield on Langworthy's car around 9:30 p.m. at San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue. After running a check on the 1985 blue Ford Escort, Avila learned that the car's registration expired in 1997, even though the car had a 1998 tag.

Avila attempted to pull him over, but Langworthy wouldn't stop. According to police, he jumped out while the vehicle was still moving.

"I knew he was going to run," Avila said. "I put my car in park and chased him into Carmelites' Park," (kitty-corner to the downtown post office).

Avila got close enough to spray the suspect with pepper spray, but said it didn't stop him, or appear to affect him at all. When Langworthy tried to climb another fence near the parking lot, Avila hit him on the thigh with his baton. Still Langworthy ran — out into the middle of Fifth Avenue — where Avila again struck him with the baton. As Langworthy stumbled in the street, Carmel Police Officer Dirk Stoddard, who had been called as back-up, tackled him.

Avila said that both officers had to jump on Langworthy to restrain him. "He was basically able to do a push-up with both of us on his back," Avila said.

Large methamphetamine rock

As the officers were apprehending Langworthy, he threw a plastic bag into the street which contained the rock of methamphetamine, according to the police report.

"It was the largest whole piece of methamphetamines I've seen in this area," Avila said. "It could probably be broken into 20 or 30 pieces."

Langworthy was carrying $480, which was confiscated by police. "If he has no job and no source of income, that money was probably gained through the sale of narcotics," Avila said.

When the officers searched Langworthy's car, they found the loaded semi-automatic handgun and a small amount of marijuana.

The officers had to struggle to handcuff Langworthy, but he finally calmed down.

"I looked at him and said, 'whatever happened, happened,'" Avila said. "I told him to cool out and be calm and we'll treat you like a gentleman. After that, he was totally compliant."

Avila said that police must be on guard even during "routine" stops. What began as a minor infraction turned into "a wanted felon with a loaded gun running around," Avila said

Langworthy was treated at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula for facial lacerations and a knee injury.

Langworthy faces a preliminary hearing at 1:30 p.m. Feb. 4 at the courthouse in Salinas, Spitz said.

Commission nixes Pebble Beach shop on Ocean Avenue

By TAMARA GRIPPI

DECIDING THAT Carmel's limit of 10 souvenir stores should also limit square footage, the Carmel Planning Commission voted unanimously Jan. 27 to turn down the Pebble Beach Co.'s application to open a new logo apparel store on Ocean Avenue.

Commissioners decided that approving the company's 2,386-square-foot retail shop — which was to go into the vacant building at Ocean and San Carlos Street downtown — would increase the "intensity of the souvenir shop use" because the Crazy Shirt shop it is replacing was only 1,196 square feet.

'I strongly urge that we put our finger in the dike right now.'

— Robin Wilson

Commissioner Robin Wilson pointed out that the floor space of Crazy Shirts had already increased by more than 300-square-feet when it relocated from a 864-square-foot location on Ocean Avenue in 1993.

"I strongly urge that we put our finger in the dike right now," Wilson said.

Other commissioners were concerned that Carmel's ordinances do not give them guidance to address the square-foot issue. "I reluctantly vote with the majority," said Commission Chairwoman Jan Fisher. "I do regret that we don't have more municipal code information."

At a future meeting, commissioners plan to address how square footage affects "intensity of use" of businesses whose numbers are limited by law.

Carmel planning staff had recommended approval of the Pebble Beach Co. application, explaining that the Goold Trust — which owns both the Crazy Shirt property and the vacant building — had agreed to abandon the former souvenir use in exchange for approval of the new permit.

The staff report said the city council set a precedent in 1993 when it allowed Crazy Shirts to expand its square footage, and that the Pebble Beach Co. should be treated the same way.

Representatives from P.B. Co. argued that square footage doesn't necessarily determine how much merchandise is sold.

"In terms of how the store is utilized, there will be a general sense of openness," said Ed Brown, vice president of planning for P.B. Co. "It's not going to be a store crammed full of merchandise. It will be tastefully done."

Following the rules

When P.B. Co. first applied to the commission Sept. 9, members turned down their request to open a shop with logo apparel because there were already 10 souvenir stores in town.

"Pebble Beach feels that it has followed the rules that were laid out," said Thomas Jamison, an attorney representing the company. "We feel that the regulations were complied with."

At the packed meeting in city hall, speakers defended and opposed the P.B. Co. application. "A lot of golfers spend time dining in Carmel, but sooner or later they have to travel into the forest to buy merchandise of Pebble Beach," said Bill Hogan, owner of a Carmel-based golf tour business. "We may as well keep them in the city."

But Linda Anderson, who worked on a task force in 1997 to put together an ordinance to cut the number of T-shirt shops in Carmel, didn't think a P.B. logo store would be a step in the right direction. "I simply can't fathom how Carmel-by-the-Sea's Planning Commission can allow another jurisdiction to come into Carmel and sell logo merchandise when we can't even control our own (Carmel-oriented merchandise)."

'It will be tastefully done.'

— Ed Brown

Others saw a natural connection between Carmel and Pebble Beach.

"The two places are so closely tied together that it's important to give Pebble Beach the chance to open a store," said Nick Glaser.

But Suzanne Paboojian, president of the Carmel Residents Association, worried that if Carmel approved a Pebble Beach store, it would be opening the door for other theme-oriented retailers such as the Disney Store and Planet Hollywood.

Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth advised the commission to consider the issues carefully. "My view as a planner, is if we're going to have 10 souvenir stores, we ought to have the best 10 we can get and that's an issue of judgment," he said.

The Pebble Beach Co. plans to appeal the decision to the Carmel City Council.

Driver runs down woman in crosswalk

By PAUL MILLER

A WOMAN crossing Dolores Street in downtown Carmel was struck by a car when the driver was temporarily blinded by sunlight on Wednesday afternoon.

Marsha Ann Sings, 64, from the small Northern California town of Clayton, suffered a broken ankle and a torn ligament in her knee, she told The Pine Cone Thursday after returning home.

Sings was walking east on Sixth when she was struck. "I was in the crosswalk and I was nearly to the curb when this fellow came around the corner completely on the wrong side of the road," she said. "I saw him coming and tried to get out of his way but my left shoe was pinned under his tire . . . that's when I heard my knee snap," Sings said.

She was on her way to look over the menu at Flaherty's with a friend when the accident happened.

"My friend kept yelling at the man that his tire was on my foot," Sings recalled. "But this fellow had stopped, and he just sat there with his window up."

The driver of the car, a tourist from Rio de Janeiro, said he was blinded by the sun as he attempted to turn from Sixth Avenue onto Dolores.

"As I turned I could not see at all," Sergio Nunes de Andrade, 68, told police immediately after the accident.

One observer noted that if a driver is temporarily blinded, he should stop moving forward until he can again see where he's going.

The Carmel policeman who investigated the accident, Cpl. Ron Spicer, agreed that the bright, late-afternoon sun was a factor in the accident.

Andrade, who was driving a large Buick rented from Alamo Rent-a-Car, was not cited and was permitted to continue on his way after providing details about his insurance.

Thom Gregg, whose jewelry store is on the corner where the accident occurred, said "he heard a scream and saw a woman in the street."

Gregg estimated that a dozen people who witnessed the accident took out cell phones to call 911.

An ambulance stationed at the Carmel Fire Station just one block away, arrived on the scene immediately and took Sings to CHOMP, where she was treated and released.

She spent the night at the Pine Inn.

"I've been coming to Carmel for 40 years and I'll be back," Sings said cheerfully.

We've protected this forest for 80 years. For the next century, we'll do the same.

Trees mean open space and natural beauty. To protect this treasure, Pebble Beach Company has already:

- Created the International Audubon Society's first California Cooperative Sanctuary golf course.
- Spent $1 million to fight pitch canker, a fungus that could destroy 85% of California's Monterey pines.
- Deeded 900 forest and coastal acres in permanent nature preserves.

We now propose limiting future growth in the Del Monte Forest even more.

Our Proposal:

Reduce Density 65% — 316 homes and a golf course instead of 889 homes that maximum zoning now allows.

Deed More Open Space — another 400 acres as permanent nature preserve — keeping more than 1,300 acres of natural open space within Del Monte Forest, forever.

Protect More Trees — We will plant a healthy new tree in the Forest for every mature tree removed and save 20,000 trees that old plans would have removed.

Protecting nature makes good sense.

RACCOONS

ness to trap and euthanize animals at the request of residents has been vehemently criticized by some wildlife advocates.

At a meeting earlier this month, Carmel city officials met with William Murray, D.V.M. — a veterinarian, microbiologist and expert on raccoon-borne diseases from San José State University — to discuss how a scientific study of raccoon population density might be carried out here.

After the meeting, Dr. Murray wrote a letter summarizing why the study is warranted. "While rare, the severe neurologic consequences, the incurability and potentially fatal outcome resulting from human infection with this parasite mitigates the rarity of it. The possibility of inadvertent infection increases with exposure to raccoon feces, which in turn is related to the number of raccoons living in a given area. Thus, the overpopulation of raccoons living in Carmel and the surrounding communities represents a risk to public health and to property," he wrote.

The proposed study was to last about one month, and involve trapping, euthanizing and dissecting a number of raccoons to determine the number of animals living in Carmel, and the diseases they carry.

The Monterey County Health Department coordinated the January meeting, because it handles issues of public health and animal control for the city of Carmel. Since then, however, the county backed off from its lead role in the controversy. Although he intends to attend Tuesday's council meeting, Monterey County Health Director Robert Melton, M.D., told The Pine Cone that he does not consider the raccoon situation a "public health emergency" which requires his intervention.

"We have no money whatsoever to conduct ecological research," Melton said. "We have no authority over wildlife populations, or urban wildlife, or research people."

Melton said he definitely encourages the city to do a study, though. "It would be wonderful to have information on the animal vectors of human disease," he said. "Because we know that for every documented case [of rare diseases] there are many more that go unreported."

Melton explained that there are 75 diseases that private doctors and hospitals are required to report to the health department; there are many more — including raccoon roundworm, dengue fever and leptospirosis — that are not reported.

"The only way to learn the true incidence of disease is through research, which is usually done by universities funded by the federal government or by private foundations," he said.

Dr. Murray and San Jose State University wildlife biologist Michael Kutilek, Ph.D., have offered their services for the study without charge. The estimated cost of supplies is less than $2,000.

Melton said the Monterey County Health Department epidemiologist, Karen Ehnert, D.V.M., will also be at Tuesday's council meeting to lend objective, scientific input if the city leaders want it.

According to Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar, representatives from Pebble Beach, Monterey and Pacific Grove have all expressed interest in the results of a Carmel study because the animals are plentiful in four jurisdictions and all have had numerous complaints from constituents who are worried about being infected by raccoon-borne diseases.

Mayor White said he wants to see the "when, where, why, how and the cost" of the study. The council could decide to hold a town meeting on the subject, he said, or ratify the decision made earlier by Kersnar: to allow the scientists to gather the data necessary to make an informed decision.

Man to serve 12 years for killing Big Sur photographer

By TAMARA GRIPPI

SEVEN MONTHS after Big Sur photographer Paul Larkin was stabbed to death, his killer, Tony Haller was convicted of voluntary manslaughter and sentenced to 12 years in prison Jan. 25.

Haller, 33 of Ventura, pleaded no contest to the manslaughter charge in the June 26 stabbing death of Larkin in Big Sur. He claimed it was self-defense. Haller agreed to take the maximum sentence for that crime — 12 years — which was handed down by Judge Terrance Duncan.

Tony Haller

Although Haller was originally charged with second-degree murder, Larkin's family agreed to the plea bargain in order to ensure a conviction, said Chris Harter, the deputy district attorney handling the case.

"You're always rolling the dice with a jury trial," Harter told The Pine Cone. "They thought they'd better take the highest [sentence] they could get."

'Some kind of justice'

Larkin's friends in the Big Sur community had mixed feelings about the conviction. "The conviction satisfies the need for some kind of justice," said Judith Share. "There's always the hope and prayer that the convicted will learn something from it."

"Having known Paul, it's disturbing that [Haller] just got 12 years for taking a man's life," said friend Linda Sonrisa. "It leaves me with a funny feeling."

Haller and Larkin had been drinking together June 25 and were last seen leaving the Fernwood Bar parking lot in Haller's van just after midnight.

According to Haller, the two men got into an argument after his van became stuck on the winding road leading to Larkin's house, Harter said.

Haller said that he stabbed Larkin in self-defense after Larkin blinded him with a blast of pepper spray. Larkin, who died of knife wounds and "blunt-force trauma," according to the Monterey County Coroner, had been stabbed nine times in the chest and back.

The evidence indicated there had been close hand-to-hand combat, Harter said. "The plea is kind of a compromise," she said, explaining that "no reasonable person" in the same situation would have felt it necessary to kill in self-defense.

Larkin's body was found near Clear Ridge Road, about three-quarters of a mile from Highway 1, four days after he had been reported missing. Haller was apprehended in Oregon two weeks later.

'No witnesses'

Some of Larkin's friends were troubled that they will never know for sure what happened.

"I was hoping the trial would bring closure," Regina Julien said. "The judge said there's no witnesses. So making up your own mind is the closure."

Paul Larkin

"It's his (Haller's) word against a dead man's," Sonrisa said.

During Haller's sentencing, Larkin's brother, Stephen, made an impassioned plea, urging Haller to do something positive to make up for the life he had taken. Stephen encouraged Haller to study in prison so he could work for the environment, a cause that had been close to Paul's heart.

Paul Larkin was an internationally known photographer who gained recognition for documenting combat in Central America in the early 1980s.

Some of Larkin's most famous photographs — taken during the 1986 Space Shuttle Challenger explosion — captured the reactions of the victims' families watching from the stands.

Where cars are king

IF YOU should run into someone who says, "I live in Carmel, and I do ALL my shopping in Carmel," better check their insurance for mental health coverage. They are delusional.

Certainly, it would be idyllic if everyone who lived here shopped here, but how many pieces of jewelry, how many works of art and how many T-shirts can one family use?

The fact of the matter is, when it comes to buying the basics of everyday life, we usually have to get in our cars and go somewhere else to shop. In the recent past, that "somewhere" was often Del Monte Center in Monterey. That was before the denizens of the dunes organized themselves into Sand City and built a plethora of barn-like buildings specializing in self-service and discount prices.

Truly, I've no quarrel with this turn of events; I like bargains as well as the next guy. I AM glad it was not built at Monastery Beach.

There's just one little thing the folks out there at the mega-shopping development failed to notice if and when they looked at retail malls of the past 50 years: The stores were in the middle; the parking lots were on the edge. Repeat after me: Shops in, cars out, shops in, cars out. Somebody in Sand City got it backwards.

I'm sure you know what I'm talking about. Whatever happened to the concept of "convenience"? The stores are so widely separated that you have to DRIVE from one to another. Though a good long walk might be beneficial to your health, you'd most likely never survive the hike across that acreage. Drivers, myself included, often ignore the painted lanes and take diagonal shortcuts, a dangerous, if efficient, way of getting from Point A to Point B, or let's say, from Marshall's to Starbucks. A person could die of thirst if they tried that trek on a sunny day.

In my quest to understand, I learned there are TWO shopping developments out there. Costco, the store that brought you pepper corns in a 30-gallon barrel, anchored the first. It's called Sand Dollar.

Circuit City, the giant that shut down just about every small TV retailer on the peninsula, was the opening gun of the northern development; it's called Edgewater on Monterey Bay. Such a pretty name — brings to mind palm trees swaying on a warm beach, not SUV's battling for closer parking spaces.

Just an aside: A recent store-opening in Edgewater was Ross, one of a chain of clothing outlets which, as a person who wears clothes, I certainly had to check out. Ross features metal shopping carts — the norm in such stores, but their carts have vertical metal poles attached to them, tall enough to fly a flag from.

I had to ask.

Seems the height of the poles prohibits them from going out the front door. Thus, the carts don't get stolen. OK, so it's not very classy, but if you're paying twenty bucks for a $100 jacket, you won't complain . . .

But back to the question of how to get around the Sand City shopping centers. Maybe a shuttle? Maybe a car-pool of fellow shoppers? Maybe YOU'VE got an idea. I should warn you, however. Don't try to call the administrative offices of Sand Dollar or Edgewater-on-Monterey Bay. They're not listed in the white pages of our latest phone book, nor are they in the yellow pages where you might expect to find them, under "shopping centers."

It would appear they haven't yet figured out just WHAT they are.

Perhaps a Mall-in-Reverse, where CARS get the choice center spot, and PEOPLE are relegated to the sidelines.

At least in Carmel, the one who signs the credit slip gets equal respect.

STORY & DIGITAL PHOTO BY MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

CHESTER ZISCHKE's goal in life is to keep every seabird off Carmel Beach. Chester believes that birds should remain airborne – not walking about on the sand, and he does his best to carry out this master plan.

Chester, a 9-year-old white standard poodle with a country clip, sports a colorful collar emblazoned with alligators. He can be seen three or four days a week at Carmel Beach, running, running, running after the occasional bird who is audacious enough to look as if it's coming in for a landing.

Mom Joan says Chester is "a character dog. The word enthusiasm puts his whole personality into perspective." Chester's love for running comes from his unfettered puppyhood in an apple orchard. When the family moved here, he was given two months in "military school" to curb his exuberance, but after a little while, the "warranty wore off," according to Mom.

Chester is taken for runs on the beach by walker Roz Wyszynski and by Sis Dana when she comes down from the City for weekends in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Gentle and great with children, Chester also likes to play with his housemate, 20-lb. Zipper, a "Siamese-looking" cat who rules. When Zipper falls asleep in Chester's bed, Chester sleeps on the floor.

No fool Chester.

Assemblyman Peter Frusetta

COWBOY IN THE CAPITOL

by Peter Frusetta

Early morning; my office in the Capitol. The first week of session was interesting. There were new members to meet, a new apartment to occupy, a new receptionist in the office and a new Governor for the state of California.

Speaker Antonio Villaraigosa appointed me to several important committees. I am vice chair of the committee that will oversee district boundary changes based on the year 2000 census. I am also on the Utilities and Commerce Committee. This group will oversee the restructuring of California's huge electrical producers.

Governor Davis' State of the State speech was a "yawner." The mild-manner former lieutenant Governor revealed his goals. He emphasized public education and went on and on – and on! He is not a charismatic person, but that's his way; he speaks in a monotone and his face is unexpressive. But the important thing is how he and his new regime will govern. I would have preferred more balance here but it didn't happen. I wish him well, and will support him when his polices benefit all the people of this state.

I, too, have a vision for California. And since this is my first "Cowboy" of 1999, I will lay out my priorities. My vision is for a California w .h tranquil, safe neighborhoods. As a boy I often played in Hollister, Salinas and Watsonville's parks while my mother and sisters shopped in the nearby "big town" stores. They left me unattended and I made friends and played with other children of my age. Those afternoons bring happy memories.

My vision is for families to be what they should be, with responsible, moral parents meeting the needs of their children. A family of faithful spouses who produce well-adjusted, mature children – children who don't need the security of a gang or the attention of being disruptive in class.

My vision is for children to care of their elderly parents and grandparents – and yet allow them the independence to be themselves. My father was so independent (like most cattlemen) that he often returned his social security checks with the note, "Thanks, but I'm able to take care of myself. I was thrifty and wise enough to have prepared for my old age, and I don't need you (the Government) to do for me what I had the foresight to do for myself."

What are my bills this session? Here is a partial list: One will prevent a judge from overturning the will of the people after a ballot initiative has been voted on and passed, another is a common-sense bill to protect the natural beauty of the Carmel-Monterey-Santa Cruz coastline, a third will restrict the use of pen laser lights, a forth that will reduce the number of death-row appeals, and finally a bill to require the labeling of foreign grown produce with its country of origin. I also have a bill to promote affordable child care for welfare parents so they can take jobs, a bill to promote health care insurance for agriculture workers who too often abuse the "free" emergency rooms at hospitals. And lastly a bill to eliminate Smog Check II and the MTBE programs.

But these ideas – my visions – will be implemented only when they are supported by this country's real source of power – you – the people. My goal right from the start has always been to return the reign of government to its real owner – the people, all the people, regardless of party affiliation. That's why I send out my surveys and continually urge you to get involved. And by your calls and letters I know you are heeding my call. And I'm happy about it.

Lastly, I want you to do something. When government and politicians do wrong, I want you to raise hell or tell me and I'll raise hell for you. When a public servant or clerk in a government office is discourteous let them know you pay their salary. In fact, you supply the $80 billion that we will spend this year. Let me know how you want it spent.

The doves and blackbirds are singing their February mating songs already and it's still January. I hope this doesn't indicate a dry year. Drought is the rancher's nightmare. I can almost hear my old uncle's comment on yesterday's sprinkle, "Well, Peter, we had a dry year storm last night, 8 feet of fog and 2 inches of wind."

As you can see, I'm excited and happy about this job. At last I know the purpose of government – and of life. A citizen Representative in Sacramento, Peter Frusetta, Peter

Garden Club fundraiser: 'A Rose is Not a Rose!'

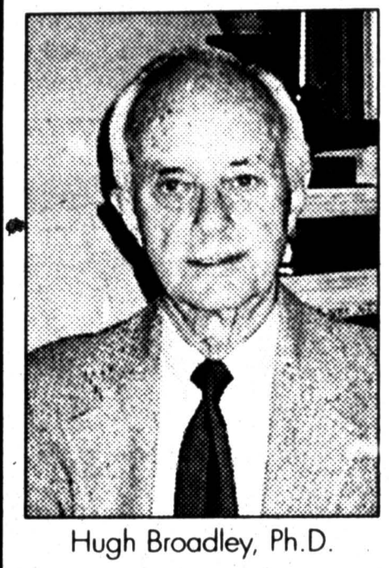
By KIRSTIE WILDE

HIS ART credentials are impeccable, so when Hugh Broadley, Ph.D. presents his slide lecture, "A Rose is Not a Rose," at this year's fundraiser for the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club, he'll have the gardeners' undivided attention.

Broadley, former curator at the National Gallery of Art in Washington D.C., will be exploring the symbolism of flowers in paintings and other art forms from the Middle Ages to the present.

Proceeds from the garden club's past fundraisers have gone to the First Murphy House Garden, Lester Rowntree Native Plant Garden, the Norton Court garden at Carmel Foundation, the Open Space Task Force and last year's top-to-bottom renovation of Piccadilly Park in downtown Carmel.

Hugh Broadley's lecture will cap the continental breakfast donated by the Pebble Beach Co., which is also providing the Main Ballroom at The Inn at Spanish Bay for the Feb. 11 event.



Hugh Broadley, Ph.D.

Tickets are $20 per person and can be purchased from the Garden Club at P.O. Box 1972, Carmel, 93921, or call 624-4668.

FRAUD

with a letter, dated Jan. 12, saying he was concerned that "there may not be sufficient checks at the initial registration to determine eligibility." But in an interview this week with The Pine Cone, Farr said he did not believe prospective voters should have to show any ID to register or vote.

"You run into civil liberties problems — and the fact that in the United States we don't require people to carry ID," Farr said.

Sigala wrote to Farr asking him to sponsor legislation to tighten voting requirements last November after Sigala watched the CBS News program "60 Minutes," on which correspondent Steve Kroft reported that fraudulent voting has become a major problem nationwide, largely because federal law makes it illegal for voters to be asked to provide any evidence of their true identity or eligibility when they register to vote or when they vote.

"Voter fraud has never been easier," Kroft said.

The "60 Minutes" report came after The Carmel Pine Cone carried a series of stories on California voter laws, which encourage registration and voting by mail without requiring potential voters to provide any evidence of their true identity or even that they exist.

To illustrate the laxity of California's voter laws, The Pine Cone registered a fictitious person, "Sandra L. Klaus," to vote.

The existence of "Ms. Klaus," who claimed to live at The Pine Cone office, was revealed in a front page story on April 10. "She" never voted.

In his letter to Sigala, Farr said he was "doubly concerned that it was our own local newspaper, The Carmel Pine Cone, which chose deliberately to violate the law for a few minutes of journalistic fame."

Sigala said Farr was wrong to blame The Pine Cone. "Their ploy was not simply to earn 'journalistic fame,'" Sigala wrote, "but to point out to all the American people. . . that voter fraud throughout America is very easy to commit and a serious problem."

Pine Cone publisher Paul Miller said he "regrets that Congressman Farr is spending his time criticizing us instead of taking seriously the public's very great concern about the ever-increasing amount of voter fraud in California."

Sigala said he was aware that calls for reform of the voter laws often were met with accusations of racism — that somehow requiring identification to register or vote would discourage Hispanics from casting their ballots.

Sigala said the news reports about voter fraud, and the instances of fraud in Chualar elections, left him "appalled and dismayed" at the inadequacy of voting laws.

"I was born in Mexico, but that doesn't make me a fool," he said. "Protecting the voting privilege is the most important way to protect our democracy."

Farr called the right to vote "the most fundamental right we have," and said he was concerned about the government regulating that right. "How onerous do we want voting to be?" he asked.

Numerous other public officials, including California Secretary of State Bill Jones, Monterey County Registrar of Voters Tony Anchundo and Carmel Mayor Ken White, have been outspoken in calling for a requirement that registered voters provide a driver's license or Social Security number, thereby making it much more difficult for anyone to vote illegally.

HOW DO YOU SPELL 'EUPHORIA'?

Carmel River School's top spellers Lillian Ferrall, Disa Yoo, Adam Behan and Zachary Parkes celebrate after some intense competition Jan. 27. Behan and Yoo, the top spellers of Wednesday's spelling bee' will compete at the Lyceum Peninsula-wide spelling bee Feb. 6. Victory was especially sweet for Behan, who won by correctly spelling "hygiene," the same word that knocked him out of last year's contest. This is the second year in a row that Yoo will represent River School. Since words in the upcoming competition can come from anywhere in the English language, the students plan to pore over dictionaries during the next week to get ready for the county-wide bee, which begins at 10 a.m. Feb. 6 at Colton Middle School in Monterey.

Tailoring by Joseph Celebrates 30th Anniversary!

Tailoring by Joseph... Proud of Success. Thanks, Employees, Customers, Suppliers and Friends for Their Support.

In a proud statement issued from their company headquarters, Tailoring by Joseph announced that 1999 is the 30th Anniversary of the founding of their business. The company was started back in 1969, the same year space flight was part of the lives of all Americans. Apollo 11 carried the first men to walk on our moon. We listened to Neil Armstrong say, "One small step for man, one giant leap for mankind" as he took his first steps on the moon. Astronauts Armstrong and Aldrin brought moon rocks back to earth.

What Else Happened in 1969?

A crowd estimated at more than half a million gathered in a small town in New York for a music festival known forever as "Woodstock." Popular music was Aquarius/Let the Sun Shine In, Come Together, Crimson and Clover, When I Die, and Honkey Tonk Woman.

Many things happened for the first time this year. We struggled for the first time with childproof prescription bottles and ate Chunky Soup by Campbell's. The Boy Scouts of America allowed girls in its Explorer program.

Yes, when you think about it, things have changed a lot in 30 years. But, after all this time there are some things which have remained the same...some things which, fortunately, haven't fallen by the wayside.

One good thing is that Tailoring by Joseph is still around and thriving after 30 years of hard work and lots of dedication by everyone involved.

Sports & Entertainment

After 7 years of being the buffoons of baseball, the NY Mets won their first World Series. The Chicago Cubs said, "Maybe next year". Ohio State defeated USC 27–16 to win the Rose Bowl. In the NBA the Celtics edged the Lakers 4 games to 3 and Wilt Chamberlain was crowned the "Rebounding King" of the NBA.

On the movie front, the hot pics were True Grit, Easy Rider, and Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, starring a relatively unknown actor named Robert Redford. But the movie that won th Oscar that year was Midnight Cowboy with Jon Voight.

This year's television was at is best. We viewed such greats as Mission Impossible, The Brady Bunch, Get Smart, Laugh-In and Marcus Welby, M.D. There was a show for everyone.

- The Concorde made its first flight
- Joe Namath and the Jets won the Super Bowl
- Presidential salary raised from $100,000 to $200,000
- Tailoring by Joseph started its first year in business

CLARIFICATION

IN OUR story, "Don't even think of parking more than 10 minutes" (Jan. 22), a sub-headline gave the erroneous impression that the parking lot in front of the Carmel-by-the-Sea post office is included in the new parking limits.

In fact, the lot is not affected. The 10-minute parking limit will be enforced 24-hours-a-day only on Fifth Avenue between Dolores and San Carlos.

According to Carmel Public Works Director Jim Cullem, the new signs are going up this week, and folks who park longer than 10 minutes (day or night) on that block may be ticketed, starting Jan. 30.

Legislature OKs state parks as final resting place

By KIRSTIE WILDE

IT WOULD be difficult to find a more beautiful place than Point Lobos to scatter the cremated remains of a loved one. Now a new state law makes it legal.

Assembly Bill 1705, authored by Tom Torlakson (D-Antioch), reverses a ban on scattering human ashes in state parks. The superintendent of state parks in Monterey and San Benito counties is expecting many requests from residents and visitors who wish to mingle the ashes of their loved ones with the scenic land around Carmel and Big Sur.

"We want to balance the desires of bereaved families, but not at the expense of the general public," explained Superintendent Mary Wright, who is working on guidelines for the disposal of cremated human remains.

"We will probably require that the ashes are scattered early in the morning on weekdays, when we have fewer hikers and picnickers in the parks," Wright said.

Ken Colombini, communications officer for the state parks department in Sacramento, said some state parks will be off-limits for the scattering of cremated remains:

■ Native American burial grounds or other sensitive archaeological sites. "We don't want confusion years from now, with modern bone fragments mixed in with ancient ones," Colombini said.

■ Highly developed historic parks, such as downtown Monterey, or those with heavy tourist traffic, like Hearst Castle.

■ At visitor outlooks, such as the top of Fremont Peak. "A lot of people scramble around the rocks up there, and trails are directly below the outlook at the peak. We don't want one family scattering remains on top of climbers going up the mountain," Colombini said.

■ From bridges, piers or cliffs overlooking the ocean, or in any lake or stream. The new law expressly forbids scattering human remains within 500 feet seaward of the ocean shore.

Anyone who wishes to distribute ashes in a state park must first get written permission from a state park superintendent.

Failure to do so can result in a $500 fine. Mary Wright can give permission at the Monterey District Office, 2211 Garden Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

Sam Morse's legacy

SAMUEL F. B. Morse is a giant on the historical landscape of the Monterey Peninsula — a man whose broad vision and sense of purpose created the Pebble Beach Golf Links and preserved much of Del Monte Forest in its natural state.

As his great-granddaughter, Mary Brownfield, explains in an article in our special section devoted to the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am this week, Morse took over management of the vast holdings of the Pacific Improvement Company in 1915 and created the Del Monte Properties Company — which is now known as the Pebble Beach Company.

His purpose was to develop the 20,000 acres controlled by the company "to the fullest extent," the Pine Cone reported on Feb. 27, 1919. "Manager Morse announces that the new concern intends to develop fully the entire area and make it the playground of the state," the Pine Cone said. In the paper's opinion, those development plans would "be a benefit to Carmel."

Morse was, indeed, an ambitious builder. Over the 50 years that he ran the Del Monte Properties Company, Morse was responsible for most of the development — roads, homes and golf courses — that exists in Del Monte Forest today.

And he had plans for many more homes — thousands more, in fact, than the Pebble Beach Company now proposes to build.

But as Brownfield points out, it was what he didn't develop that is Morse's principal legacy. When he arrived on the scene, a subdivision of more than 300 home sites, each an urban-sized lot of about 5,000 square feet, had been laid out on the land that stretches between Arrowhead Point and the Carmel city limits.

Next week, that magnificent stretch of land — now the 5th to 14th holes of the Pebble Beach Golf Links — will be enjoyed by tens of thousands of golf fans who have S.F.B. Morse to thank for eliminating the home sites and turning the land into a public golf course.

His principal aim, of course, was to make money. But he understood that a balance of development and preservation would reward his company financially by attracting well-heeled home buyers who would jump at the chance to live surrounded by the scenic glory of the Monterey Peninsula.

Carmel and Pacific Grove were jammed with houses and shops on small lots . . . their windswept open spaces built closely with cottages and most of their trees cut to make way for roads and homes. According to its general plan, fully one-third of Pacific Grove is paved.

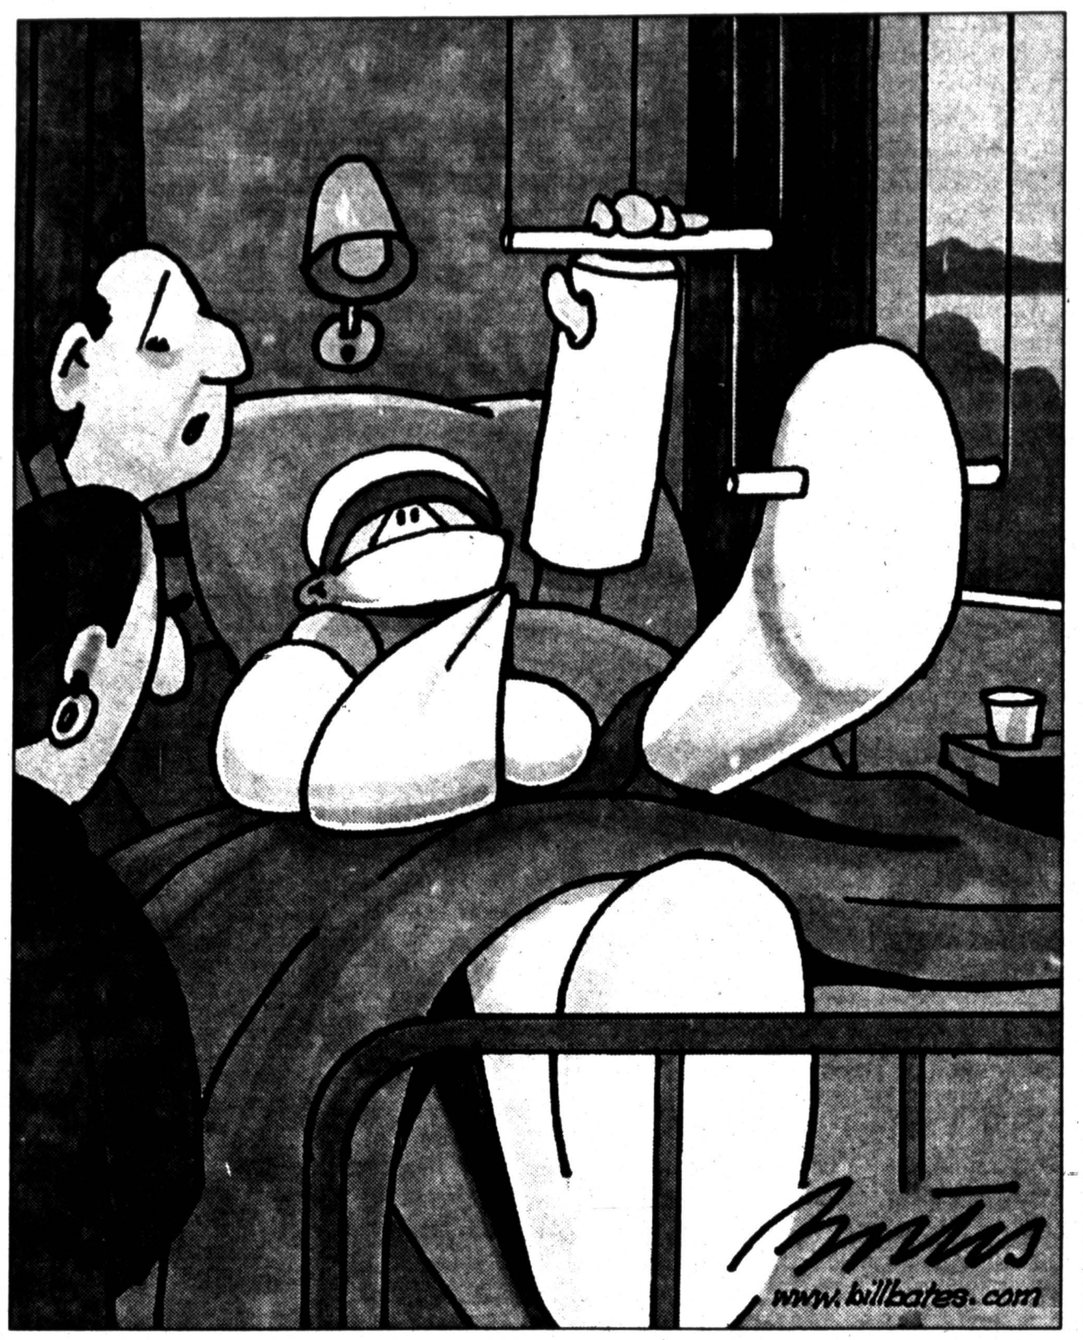
Not so in Pebble Beach, where home sites are large, roads are few and most of the trees have been left right where they stood.

Little could Morse have imagined the incredible success his vision would be at the end of the century.

As we report today in our Real Estate section, no less than 55 homes were sold in Del Monte Forest last year for more than $1 million.

As the current battle over preservation vs. property rights heats up again after the AT&T, at least everyone will have been reminded that Sam Morse put us on the right track.

BATES



"He trumped his partner's ace."

Grand Jury member responds to accusations

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to the commentary written by Gary Tate and published in The Carmel Pine Cone. I served as chair of the Cities and Special Districts Committee, 1998 Monterey County Civil Grand Jury. It was this committee that undertook the investigation on the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District. The report was directed to the elected Board of Directors who are responsible to the public to which they serve. Mr. Tate has incorrectly implied that the foreman, Bob Quinn, or other members of the jury had a political agenda. This is simply just untrue. Many of us had never even heard of Mr. Tate before the investigation. As an avid user of the district's parks, I was not aware of any of the issues until the investigation was underway. Mr. Tate, you should be aware that no member of the jury can meet and debate you on any of the issues set forth in the report. You can be sure, however, that the findings are based in fact. The report, once voted on by the jury, was then forwarded to the court for final review. Again the report was approved for publication. Now we await the response of the elected officials who are responsible for the district and the employees who are employed by it.

'Pine Cone can do better'

Dear Editor:

One can only wonder what motivated the Pine Cone to make a six-week-old story — "Critic of PB plan finishes last in residents' election" — its headline/lead story in the "Happy New Year" edition.

A Little Trip to the NFL Pro Bowl

By JERRY STEWART

When the 1999 NFL Pro Bowl kicks off Feb. 7 in Honolulu, Hawaii, there will be plenty of big names on the field.

Names like Jerry Rice and Barry Sanders. Reggie White and Terrell Davis. Sarah Little.

Sarah Little?

Yes, the 17-year-old Carmel High junior will be at the game, and yes, she will be on the field, but don't expect her to deliver any big hits.

Unless of course a pom-pon inadvertently flies loose.

While competing at the Canam International Cheerleading Competition held last March in South Carolina with her CHS compadres, Little made quite an impression.

Little has plenty of reasons to smile, as she did when 'Padre' presented her with a homecoming bouquet.

So big, in fact, that judges invited her to take part in the finals which will be held on the Big Island during the NFL's version of All-Star weekend.

"I'm super excited," said the Carmel Valley resident, who roots for the Padre football and basketball squads. "I've always wanted to go to the Pro Bowl."

A devoted San Francisco 49er fan, Little said she was notified of her accomplishment when judges posted results on the last day of the Canam competition.

"All of my friends are cheerleaders and they were all excited for me," said Little, who will be the only representative from Monterey County.

And now that she's going to the game, Little realizes that one of her dreams is that much closer to becoming reality.

"I want to meet Jerry Rice and Steve Young," said Little. "I want my picture taken with them."

A cheerleader since the seventh grade at Carmel Middle School, the 5-foot-1 brunette said she gets a kick out of cheerleading because she used to be a gymnastics nut when she was younger.

Although she now mostly performs on the sidelines, when Little has entered the action in the past she's made her own impact.

As a freshman in 1997, Little made a splashing debut as a member of the CHS diving team, earning a third place finish at the highly competitive Central Coast Section Championship.

However, even with her great showing, during her sophomore year Little decided to dry out the Speedos and lace up her Nikes instead as a member of the track team.

"I just wanted a change of pace," said Little.

This spring, she will be back in action on the oval, competing in the triple jump, long jump and high jump.

But first is the Pro Bowl, where she will do her routine during halftime and after the game with more than 100 girls.

All in front of a panel of All-American Cheer and Dance judges and a packed house with a possible chance to secure the winning scholarship.

"Winning would be great," said Little. "I would want to use the scholarship at my dream school, UCLA. I want to be a cheerleader there, too."

On Feb. 7 she might not get as much attention as the stars surrounding her, but don't doubt for a second that Little won't be shining just as brightly.

Airborne Carmel High cheerleader Sarah Little's acrobatic feats have landed her a trip to the Feb. 7 Pro Bowl in Hawaii.

ON THE TURF: The Carmel High girls soccer team (7-1-5) rebounded from their crushing loss to King City by handily defeating Seaside 7-0 on Jan. 26. Team-leading scorer Emily Moss chipped in two goals while Stephanie Quinn, Kersten Wehde, Nikki Gillette, junior Jillian Nemeth and senior Jenn Yee each scored one goal.

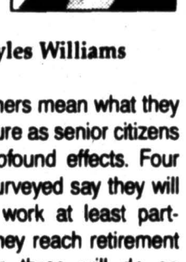
The Golden Years



By Myles Williams

If baby boomers mean what they say, their future as senior citizens will have profound effects. Four out of five surveyed say they will continue to work at least part-time when they reach retirement age. One in three will do so because they are enjoying working. About one in five say they will need the money. The boomer generation, born between 1946 and 1964, totals 76 million. Even if something less than 80 percent will still work part-time, they will be strengthening the system by paying Social Security taxes on their earned income.

Growing up in West Virginia, Velma Thorne Carter learned about politics and Government from discussions at the supper table. She also learned from her mother how to create hand-stitched quilts At age 76 Mrs. Carter continues to turn out exquisite quilts. One of the latest depicts the faces of every U.S. President. But that's not all she does. Retired as a family therapist, she is a member of her local zoning board, a committeewoman for her political party and an author. Good jobs that don't pay, she quips.

Two restaurants poised to open in Carmel

By MORGAN

Two NEW restaurants will be opening in Carmel, one Friday, Jan. 29, the other shooting for open doors before the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am — both of them with unique themes:

Pasqual's, which has taken over the space left vacant by the Café Berlin on Junipero between Fifth and Sixth, is set to open Friday, Jan. 29 under the ownership of Ray and Nancy Pasqual. Ray, who assistant-chefed at Café Berlin for four years and was day chef at John Gardiner's Tennis Ranch, will be chef de cuisine at the new restaurant, while Nancy will be in charge of the front of the house.

"Pasqual's will be the only jazz-themed restaurant in Carmel," Ray told us this week, energetically preparing for the grand opening. Emulating "one of those small places in New York City," Pasqual's will play jazz recordings as light background music, and framed black and white photos of Frank Sinatra, Louis Armstrong, Stan Getz, Ella Fitzgerald and a decorative six-piece jazz combo of figurines will serve as atmospheric wall decorations. The all copper of the open kitchen will be echoed in the copper-colored chairs in the dining room, covered with faux leopard fabric. "The decor will bring you back in time," Ray said.

Pasqual's will be open Tuesday through Sunday for lunch from 11:30 to 2:30, reopening again at 5:30 for dinner and remaining open 'till 9 — except on Friday and Saturday when it stays open until 10 p.m.

Ray will focus on both California and continental cuisine. One of his specialties is braised shortribs with creamy mashed potatoes and roasted vegetables, and "Scallops Presley" (named after the Pasquals' 7-month-old daughter): Scallops on a bed of eggplant salsa with a lime-dill sauce. There will be nightly specials.

For reservations or info, call Pasqual's at 624-2200.

THE POLO CLUB GRILL AND BAR, 3690 The Barnyard, Carmel, is a-hum with workers putting finishing touches on the "upscale, fun restaurant," according to Csaba Ajan, one of the owners, along with Ted Leidig and Tony Salameh.

"It's not a night club," Csaba points out, but there will be live music (they have a baby grand) and a dance floor in the restaurant for nighttime enjoyment. The quadraphonic sound system will be at a sound level that "allows diners to converse comfortably while others dance," Csaba told us.

Site chef de cuisine will be Scott Trambley, a grad of Hyde Park's CIA and formerly sous chef at Highlands Inn and the Bel Air Hotel in Southern Cal, while Ajan and Salameh will be the management team.

The Pacific Rim menu (a marriage of Asian and California cuisine) has been put together by executive chefs Max Muramatusu of Carmel's Anton & Michel, aided by Marc Vandenhove, formerly of S.F.'s Donatello.

Luncheon will be served daily from 11 to 3; a light menu from 3 p.m. until midnight; and dinner from 5 to 10. The cocktail lounge, open until midnight, will serve a light menu "different than most bars," according to Csaba, who cites such examples as "prosciutto and mango pizzetta, or sushi plate with spring roll, sashimi and California roll or a lamb potpie — all light and inexpensive midnight meals."

Express luncheons will feature daily-changing Pacific Rim specialities served in a Japanese lacquer box, which will be planned with fresh fish, chicken, beef or pork, crispy salads, rice or risotto or polenta — for $8.95.

Csaba says dinner could commence with a huge won ton filled with duck breast confit with brandied plum sauce, and followed by a whole fish — a one-person entrée from the wood-burning oven — or tilapia, oven-braised and served with a Pernod and lemon beurre blanc and fennel potatoes.

Csaba has the truly dedicated restaurateur's ability to describe food in the most sensual, appetizing manner, but shortage of space prevents us from detailing more entrées and fun desserts.

There are two outdoor patios, also, both heated, and one (The "Partagas patio") reserved for smokers. Look for the grand opening soon around AT&T Pro-Am time (Feb. 4 to 7).

THEATER REVIEW

Baby boomers feel the pinch in multi-generational 'sandwich'

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

Pragmatic Glendon Barrow (Stephen McHenry) confronts his befuddled and irascible mother, Mrs. Barrow (Leonore Opalach), in an original play by Philip Pearce.

Staff Players Repertory Company is offering a world premier at the old Indoor Forest Theatre. The play, "Taking Care," gives us a fresh look at an old and enduring problem.

Today it is a problem for the "baby boomer" generation; the generation about which this play is written. In reality, however, it is a problem that any "sandwiched" generation must endure, and one that this clever play explores.

Written by local actor and playwright Philip Pearce, "Taking Care" considers the problems of the three components of the "sandwich": the aging parent, the offspring (now the caregivers) and the children of the caregivers. It is, as the play reveals, a convoluted problem with no easy answers, since all solutions consider only the most obvious and selfish resolutions.

Two sons, the pragmatic Glendon Barrow, played by Stephen McHenry, and the more sentient son, Stephen Barrow, played by Jeffrey Thompson, arrive at their mother's home to discuss and consider solutions to providing for her care as she sinks into senility.

The home is in complete disarray when Glen arrives hours before his brother and is met on the doorstep by the nervous and vacuous housekeeper and nursemaid, Nadine, played to ruffled perfection by Lisa Estabrooks.

Not only do the two sons suffer from inner and personal family conflict, their solutions to what they perceive as their mother's inability to care for herself are wildly disparate. Their individual approach to solving the problem betrays their own failings and character.

Revealing nicknames

The dominant son, Glendon, fails to recognize that their mother's paramount need is . . . purpose, which Stephen appears to recognize. This leads to conflict between the siblings. Revealing of their attitudes toward their mother are the nicknames each give her. To Glen, his mother is "Old Lady." To Stephen, mom is "Sunshine." Leonore Opalach as the befuddled and irascible mother, Mrs.

she pulled out some smoked cheese. The BB member still shook his head, and she realized she had run out of options. She reluctantly pulled out the incriminating evidence — a partially eaten Belgian endive — and handed it over.

The Beagle Brigade member immediately received formal praise from his superior for his sharp collar, with numerous pats on the head along with the words: "Good boy! GOOD BOY!"

Note that public opinion was clearly against her; witnesses were heard yelling: "Shame on you for trying to smuggle endives into the United States!" Reports that these witnesses were laughing are unconfirmed.

I'm back!

■ 'A Village Affair' is a Valley success

As I struggled through the fog of jet lag, my guardian angel (Flo Snyder) with her cohorts (Fleece Dennis and Donna Jeit) saved me once again with the following report:

Was there anyone at home in Carmel Valley on Jan. 18th? Not likely. They were all at the 10th annual "A Village Affair," an event in which the 20-member Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee highlights the area's finest in gourmet food, wines and auction extravaganzas.

Nearly 500 attendees joyfully jammed the white-tented areas of Roy and Donna Woods' development site for the gala, the proceeds of which will be used to help pay for the Carmel Valley Community Park.

The results were well worth the non-stop efforts of Daniel Barduzzi and Glen Gurries in coordinating the 19 restaurants and 12 wineries who participated.

Chaired by Pinkie Terry, Joan Vandervort and Leslie Voss – who couldn't say enough about all their co-workers' efforts – the event boasted the added luster of Master of Ceremonies Pat Duval and auctioneers Pete DeVries and Jeff Shirley.

But eyes inevitably were drawn to the raffle prize: a gleaming, fire-engine-red 1968 Cadillac convertible, affectionately called "Big Red" and donated by Running Iron Restaurant's Nelson and Jenn Foreman.

When the lucky winner was finally called out, it turned out to be Samuel Klemek, who said he dipped into his "Fun Fund" to buy a raffle ticket despite his wife's desire to leave early. What a great way to have fun!

■ Monterey Museum kicks off 40th year

The Monterey Museum of Art's Third Thursday event on Jan. 21st was more special than usual this time around: it represented a kick-off to the museum's 40th anniversary year.

It started off with a dedication and ribbon-cutting event at the redesigned Frances Elkins Memorial Park next door. The park will soon be a home for sculptures on loan, all this thanks to the Will and Mary Shaw Family Trust.

Museum guests were then treated to some wonderful wine tasting by Chateau Julien and music by Mary Ann Randl and Ames Anderson.

Marcia DeVoe was caught still in her teaching mode (after 36 years of teaching in Carmel) lecturing to C. J. and Glenda Sullivan. Speaking of the influence of builder M. J. Murphy around our area, she recalled being shooed away by her dad after she nonchalantly walked across blueprints — lying on the floor — being reviewed by her dad and the renowned builder.

Member Sandy Marks had taken the opportunity to introduce friends Ron Lebus and Ron Charvonia to the museum. Ron thought the exhibits were absolutely "awesome!"

Amazing to think it's been 40 years that the Peninsula has had such a museum! Stay tuned for some super special events this year . . . .

■ Monterey Symphony conductor search continues

Being "forced" to experience all the different candidates vying for the conductor's job with the Monterey County Symphony may be challenging for the decision-makers, but it certainly is a treat for the rest of us.

On Jan. 22nd, at a Stokes Adobe luncheon organized by the Friends of the Symphony and chaired by board vice presidents Connie Smith and Bev Weakley, the latest candidate, Bernard Rubenstein, was introduced. Following the lunch was a short lecture on music program selection by the very charismatic and experienced conductor.

And lest anyone think he was speaking to an unsophisticated audience, it should be mentioned that guests included the symphony's search committee chairman, Mac McCarthy (former chairman of the Detroit Symphony) and Fernando Guzman, whose family tree features many professional musicians among its branches. (Fernando's wife, Betty Bryant, is a former symphony board member.)

I was seated next to Virginia LiDay, who is a long-time amateur theater entertainer and sang at First Night Monterey. But our main conversation topic — that is sure to increase in popularity as the year progresses — is how people are planning to spend the Millennium's holidays (obviously much more interesting than the acts in the Circus of Congress).

I was awed at Louise Guard's travel experiences, which include tenting in Africa and cruising Antarctica. And for "the" New Year's Eve event, she plans to be back in the Antarctica. By the way, am I the only idiot who didn't know bears belong to the Arctic and penguins belong to the Antarctic . . . and never the twain shall meet?

Cannery Row

What's happening this month in and around the Monterey Peninsula's historic waterfront

Restaurant Row

Every meal's a home run at Monterey Jack's Fish House & Sports Bar

Housed in the Monterey Canning Co. Warehouse, a former sardine packing plant built c. 1920, Monterey Jack's Fish House & Sports Bar is the culmination of the owners' 50-plus years experience in the restaurant business. They bring you their favorite recipes for astonishing seafood dishes, great steaks, and a large variety of appetizers and light meals.

Jack and his partner, Richard, wholeheartedly believe in exceeding their guests' expectations and do so with extremely friendly, attentive service and a quality that far exceeds their moderate prices. When was the last time you had steak & lobster for under $20? How about $15.95?!! Along with the freshest salmon, halibut and swordfish, you really should try their cioppino, an Italian fish stew full of crab, clams, shrimp, scallops and salmon. To die for!

For meat lovers – the Angus rib eye is prepared Jack's way (with a brandied mushroom sauce) or blackened. The filet mignon and baby back ribs are both repeat winners.

But the food is just part of the Monterey Jack's experience. Jack and Richard are sports fan-atics, and their restaurant reflects it – with walls and display cases filled with sports memorabilia they've collected, customers have contributed, and their clientele have left behind. Whether you are a Jerry Rice fan, a Troy Aikman or Barry Bonds devotee, love to reminisce about the '27 Yankees or yearn to jump like Mike – you'll love just browsing while dining or watching the action on their big screen TVs.

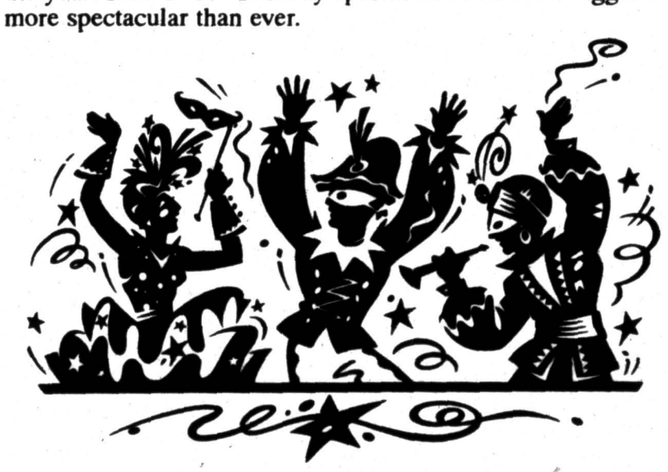
Mardi Gras On Cannery Row

Mardi Gras comes to Cannery Row on "Fat Tuesday" again this year--on the last night before Lent--Tuesday, February 16th. Those lucky revelers that enjoyed last year's almost impromptu Mardi Gras on Cannery Row will quickly urge you to join them at this year's celebration. It's going to be another one of "those Cannery Row nights to remember!"

And yes, this is the same Mardi Gras being celebrated in New Orleans and Rio and in countries round the world on "Fat Tuesday." On the Row, much of it will be, like last year, a New Orleans flavored funfest with free beads, masks and goodies for everyone coming to Cannery Row to celebrate with us.

"Mardi Gras on Cannery Row" is produced by New Wave Broadcasting, the folks with five of the Central Coast's most popular FM radio stations: KCDU, KPIG, KMBY, KXDC, and reps for KBOQ. With that many Monterey Peninsula FM stations joining in a joint production of Mardi Gras on Cannery Row, it will be difficult not to know all the details by "Fat Tuesday"--so just stay tuned to your favorite music for all the details. Each station will also be letting you know where to pick up your free beads and party perks for Mardi Gras on Cannery Row. Stay tuned, too, for information on this year's big "Best Costume" contest awards.

Bruce Brooks, owner of Blue Fin Cafe & Billiards--one of the Cannery Row establishments that gave this great new idea a try last year--said that even with the very short lead-in time for last year's first Mardi Gras on Cannery Row, that it far exceeded his expectations, and like Cannery Row's other clubs and restaurants, it turned out to be one of the most fun and festive nights of the year. 1999's "Fat Tuesday" promises to be even bigger and more spectacular than ever.



In addition to last year's night club and restaurant line up of music, festive eats and drinks, there's a big new spin on this year's Mardi Gras on Cannery Row.

This year's Mardi Gras, produced in association with the Cannery Row Marketing Council and the Cannery Row Association, will feature something many of last year's revelers recommended: a Mardi Gras procession down Cannery Row!

For more information on how to participate in the 7:00 p.m. Mardi Gras procession, call Ruthi Bellinger, New Wave Broadcasting, at 658-5200. And get ready for another grown-ups night on Cannery Row!

Don't miss being part of another new Cannery Row Tradition, Mardi Gras on Cannery Row. And, as usual, it's free to the public and fun for the spirited.

So be sure to put February 16th, "Fat Tuesday," on your calendar, stay tuned to your favorite New Wave Broadcasting FM station, and we'll see you for another great night on "America's Most Famous Street."

TAKING CARE . . .

Barrow, is a delight to watch in her portrayal as she scoots around the stage with her walker and demands her hearing aids and her evening cocktail.

As the play unfolds, we realize that Mrs. Barrow gives Nadine purpose, Stephen gives his mother purpose, and Glendon has a way of stripping purpose from everybody he comes into contact with.

There is an unexpected twist to the plot that is not revealed until the closing moments of the final act. This twist calls upon the introduction of one final character, Jerry (Chris England), a young Mr. Fix-it type who believes a cup of coffee is the answer to any problem.

Nick Hovick's direction is sensitive and makes use of his players' range of emotions. His stage blocking and set design take advantage of every inch of the tiny stage, and although the "Chippendale" chair is unbelievable, we do recognize the prop as a chair.

"Taking Care" is a good, well-produced play. If you call yourself a drama aficionado, this is one play you must put on your calendar.

ROBERT BLY will not be appearing in the Chapman Room of Sunset Center the evening of Feb. 6 as expected. The National Book Award poet and lecturer has had to cancel the reading.

This will resolve a conflict some poetry aficionados must have been experiencing: Performance Carmel has scheduled poets of quite another genre for the same Saturday evening, same hour, but in Sunset Theater: Richard Dedeaux, Otis O'Solomon and Amde Hamilton, "The Watts Prophets," in "Talk Up, Not Down."

If you've not seen or heard them before, let me quote Sunset Center's director, Brian Donoghue, who, not generally given to hype, says he wants to honor them for the "astonishing and powerful role the Watts Prophets have played in our American cities for over three decades." The Prophets' poetry performance will be accompanied by a jazz combo. For information, call the Sunset: 624-3996.

Intimate setting for jazz straight-up

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

IN MY obvious approval and excitement, it appears that in my last column I jumped the gun on the name change that will eventually take place at the Jazz Store in Carmel. Although owners Alan Schultz and Gil Wisdom do intend to go through with the change, the celebrated venue still, for now goes by, the moniker the Jazz Store.

Performing there this weekend both Friday and Saturday nights are vocalist Rebecca Parris and her Quartet featuring pianist George Mesterhazy, bassist Peter Barshay and drummer Fred Harris. An internationally celebrated jazz vocalist, her skills are best summed up by jazz great Shirly Horn; "Her voice sets her apart from any vocalist on record today. A mood that transcends the ordinary, that in one moment exudes warmth and is poignant, in another, driving hard and swinging." Tickets are $30 per person.

Also this month in the intimate room located in the Crossroads Shopping Center, check out one of the coolest jazz/blues pianists and composers on the planet, Mose Allison. A "Certified Senior Citizen" from the Mississippi Delta, Allison will appear with local bassist Nick Williams on Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 2-3. Call 624-6432 for reservations.

Jazz at the Hyatt Regency, Monterey, has become a successful endeavor under the direction of drummer David Morwood. A transplanted New Yorker who by day practices medicine, Morwood has revitalized the jazz scene at the Hyatt with monthly Sunday jam sessions and a wide variety of guest artists performing on weekends.

Last weekend's jam featured a wide array of local jazz talent as well as featured guest appearances by sax players Greg Abate and Bob Johnson. The Sunday jam always takes place the fourth Sunday of the month from 2 until 5

Wow! 55 Pebble Beach homes sell for more than $1 million

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

AN ASTONISHING 55 homes sold in Del Monte Forest — the residential enclave that surrounds Pebble Beach — for prices higher than $1 million in 1998, according to statistics compiled by a specialist in pricey real estate.

The Crocker Mansion on 17 Mile Drive sold for $13.2 million last September, the single biggest sale from a collection of multi-million dollar residences that sold last year.

Mike Canning of Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty says the large number of big-money sales set a new record, topping the 38 $1 million-plus sales recorded in 1997.

"The strongest source of home buyers for these types of properties is Northern California," Canning says, "and for the last couple of years the high-tech and venture capital industries have generated phenomenal wealth."

Harper's Magazine reported last month that an average of 64 new Silicon Valley millionaires were created each day in 1998.

And the big downturn in the stock market last August created only a "momentary pause" in the market, Canning said.

According to his statistics, eight homes sold for more than $4 million during 1998; 15 went for prices between $2 million and $4 million; and 32 homes went for more than $1 million but less than $2 million.

The single biggest sale, and the all-time record in the forest, was the Crocker Mansion on 17 Mile Drive, which sold for $13.2 million in September. Canning represented both parties in the transaction.

Carmel-by-the Sea also recently set an all-time record, with the sale of a home on Scenic Road for $8.25 million. Tim Allen and Greg Linder handled that one.

What accounts for the popularity of the area?

"I have frequently heard from people who have traveled the entire world — after having seen the best that the world has to offer — that Pebble Beach is more scenic than anything they've ever seen before," Canning says. "Put that together with the fact that its an hour-and-a-half drive from the spot many of the high-tech people work, and you can see that Pebble Beach is the perfect spot for a weekend retreat or hideaway."

Carmel to get house built right around giant oak

By TAMARA GRIPPI

LOCAL BUILDER Steve Dallas got the OK from the Carmel Planning Commission to build a new house on Guadalupe, which is designed around a large oak tree.

Plans for the 1,600-square-foot house include saving 13 of the 19 oak trees that are currently on the vacant lot. Several commissioners liked the idea that the prominent oak tree at the center of the lot would remain intact.

"The way you're getting around those trees is beautiful," said Carmel Planning Commissioner Frank Wasko.

Planners also like the way the house would fit in behind the oak trees.

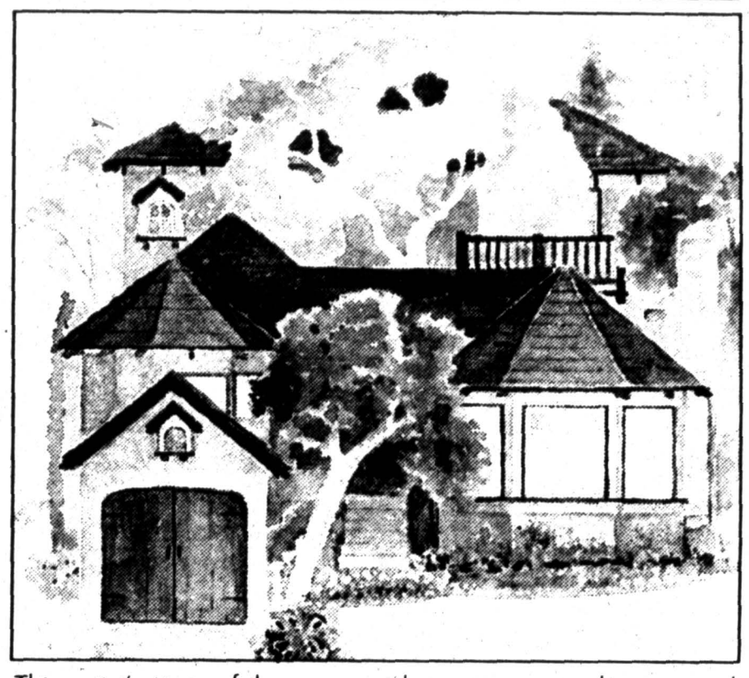
Of 19 oak trees on this vacant lot on Guadalupe Street, 13 will remain after the house is built.

'The way you're getting around those trees is beautiful.'

— Carmel Planning Commissioner Frank Wasko



This artist's view of the approved structure omits the terraced front yard and five mature oak trees scheduled to be preserved. Other oaks are shown smaller than actual size.

While the branches of the center oak will help to conceal the upper story of the house from Guadalupe Street, another cluster of live oaks will obscure much of the first story of the house, according to Carmel Planning staff.

The stucco house will have wood windows and a composition shingle roof. In addition, it will feature bay windows with exposed rafters on the building façade.

While a few commissioners encouraged Dallas to use a wood shake roof, the majority of commissioners were satisfied with the asphalt shingle.

"When we walked the streets of the neighborhood, we felt it (the design) was in keeping with the feel of the neighborhood," Dallas said.

Soul Mate

We often hear the term "soul mate" when speaking of a significant other, but what about our houses? Do they not also qualify as a kind of soul mate? Are they simply boards and mortar stuck together in some pragmatic fashion? Sometimes, but not always. Homes are capable of offering something more and this home does. It is the kind of home you are simply comfortable being around; it feels right. It makes you smile just being in its presence. It is better because of its history, not in spite of it. It offers lightness and a way to appreciate life in the private gardens and by being near the sea. It comforts on days that seem gloomy and amplifies joy when all seems right with the world. It teaches that simplicity is a path to happiness and that sometimes less is more. It is the kind of home where you can truly just be yourself rather than try to impress others. Three bedrooms, 2 baths, oversized lot, recently restored in Carmel. Finally, look forward to coming home...$850,000.

Undergrounding utility wires: The price of doing nothing

By BILL AND ALICE ENGLANDER

LAST SUMMER, a citizens committee — of which we were members — prepared a report on the feasibility and costs of undergrounding utilities in the city of Carmel. A report was submitted to the City Council in October for referral to the Planning Commission.

One of the things the committee learned was that utility companies — electric, phone and cable TV — can cut away trees, branches and other greenery that comes close to the overhead wires. Because of recent big storms and the power failures that came with them, there is a movement in the state legislature to give utilities even more power in this arena.

Look down any residential street in Carmel and imagine the trees and branches cut back several feet around the overhead wires. It's not a pretty picture.

On a recent trip to San Diego, we observed the result of this practice first-hand (see accompanying photo). The utility company there is actually cutting off the tops of palm trees if they are near their overhead lines. It was a chilling reminder of the power they have and the potential effects on our urban forest.

The only long-term solution is to underground the wires. The Planning Commission will be reviewing the Undergrounding Committee's report in the next few years and will be deciding how and when to work on this important project.

On a recent trip to San Diego, the Englander s were shocked to see what the local utility company had done to these palm trees that had grown too near power lines.

LETTERS

Who really directed this seemingly negative campaign? Speculation is not offered here.

Instead, a plea is made for balance, fairness, and journalistic integrity.

Many Peninsulans feel the best Forest plan has yet to be given fair consideration — by the County, The Del Monte Forest Property Owners, or PB Co.

One such plan was a Compromise offered 2 years ago. This reasonable development plan would: allow 150 housing units; preserve the Monterey Pine forest and its sensitive habitat; protect rare plants; leave the historic Equestrian Center intact; and allow a 9-hole addition to Spyglass Hill GC, making 27 holes in all. (Note: There are 900 27-hole courses in the US).

This Compromise was encouraged by (then) Supervisor Sam Karas, Supervisor David Potter, the Coastal Commission, Department of Fish and Game; and it was endorsed by the environmental community. After much stalling, PB Co rejected the Compromise. It chose, instead, to seek 403 units, an 18-hole resort course, and to move the Equestrian Center. Their decision will undoubtedly lead to lawsuits and a probable Referendum vote — all of which were avoidable through the Compromise.

We urge the Pine Cone to be a positive factor. Be balanced and fair. Above all else, protect and cherish your journalistic integrity. Coverage of Dominique LeGrande-List and her passionate views, supported by many, was hardly an example of these qualities. The Pine Cone can do better.

Ron Read, Pebble Beach

'Truly credible raccoon expert'

Dear Editor:

I have just read this week's edition of your paper and I wish to express my admiration for your having brought forth a much needed accurate exposé of the raccoon roundworm problem in our community and in doing so exposing the inaccuracy of the previous reports in the Herald and perhaps other media of which I am unaware. Having quotations from a truly credible expert such as Dr. Kazacos rather than obviously uninformed quotations from off the wall sources certainly is the basis for sound journalism and we must all thank you for your diligence.

I as many others in the community am having a real problem with the animals at my home and have just written the enclosed letter to Mr. Kersnar with the hope we can do something about this problem.

Again thank your for your excellent work, please continue to expose inaccuracies being reported elsewhere and do keep the public informed by updating what progress is being made with this matter in general.

John H. Moore, MD, Carmel

The following is the text of Dr. Moore's letter to City Administrator Jere Kersnar:

Dear Mr. Kersnar:

I have just read the Pine Cone article regarding our local raccoon problem with great interest. I want to congratulate you on your grasp of the problem and your fortitude in calling in credible experts to deal with a real problem in our city. We live less than a block from the City Hall and are having a severe problem with the animals inasmuch as we have the unfortunate situation of having raccoon latrine in a small area of our front yard which is frequently visited (at least 3 to 4 times a week). We have followed all the directions given us by the SPCA to make the area unattractive to the raccoons with no relief (i.e., place rags soaked with ammonia about the area, mothballs suspended in stockings about the periphery, a bright light trained on the area at night, heavily thorn-laden rose canes interlaced across the area, etc.). We have talked to the Critter Getter but understood he is unable to trap animals in the open. We have been spraying the area with squirrel and raccoon repellent with no results to date. As far as I know no one in the neighborhood is feeding the raccoons or putting out dog or cat food at night. We clean the area as often as possible by shoveling the droppings into double plastic bags and dispose of them in the garbage. While this exercise is unpleasant our primary worry is the health aspects of the situation inasmuch as we enjoy working in our garden.

The house next door north of us has had to patch a hole torn in the roof by raccoons three times in the past few months, the house next door south has their lawn dug into nearly nightly, the home across the street has had to have the Critter Getter twice in the recent past, and another house on the block has had shingle siding torn off frequently. Obviously this block is overpopulated with the animals.

With all this activity I would be very grateful if you could direct Dr. Murray's attention to our home as we would like very much to have it used as a trapping site.

Sunset Center momentum

Dear Editor:

To correct any misleading impression that may have been left by last week's headline about the Sunset Theater Project, I would like to convey that good progress is, indeed, being made. Both the city and Sunset Center for the Arts (the non-profit fund raising organization) are moving forward in a very positive way with this joint public-private venture.

An updated memorandum of understanding between the "Arts" and the city has just been approved by the Carmel City Council at its January 12 meeting, covering a number of important aspects to carry the project forward.

When the city council conceptually approved the design approach presented in June, it also addressed the need to prepare an addendum to the environmental impact report. At that time, the city council instructed that other potential additions, such as a community room and an extended stage right wing, be evaluated. Design plans have now been prepared and reviewed and are scheduled for release in February. They will then be reviewed by city commissions which will forward their recommendations to the city council.

In November, the positive results of our fund-raising feasibility study were presented before the city council. Since then, a healthy momentum has been generated by everyone involved with the project. Maintaining this momentum is essential in order for potential donors to be enthusiastic about giving to such a worthy community project. In this climate, there is every reason to remain upbeat for success in the work ahead. There will be more progress to report soon!

Nancy Doolittle, President

EIGHTY YEARS after it opened, Pebble Beach Golf Links is still considered one of the greatest golf courses in the world, and is certainly one of the most famous. The only course of its caliber that has remained open to the public, Pebble Beach is the product of one man's vision for a piece of idyllic land that had been slated to become a large housing development.

Morse Code, first learned about the property he would come to love in the portfolio of the Pacific Improvement Company, which he had been hired by William H. Crocker to liquidate in 1915. Morse had worked for Crocker for several years in the San Joaquin Valley before moving to the Monterey Peninsula, where the Pacific Improvement Company had vast holdings.

After liquidating most of the company, Morse began to closely evaluate the remaining property, which was known as the Del Monte unit. Although the area included the majestic Del Monte Hotel, a railroad, a golf course, beach property, land in Carmel Valley and on the mountainside, and a water company to supply it, the 20,000-acre area was losing money.

When Morse took over, he embarked upon a major effort to make the land profitable. After renovating the Hotel Del Monte and the Del Monte Golf Course, Morse alongside the Pacific Ocean, and embarked on the design of the Pebble Beach Golf Links in 1915.

This was not the first time the property had been examined with an eye towards the sport, however. A nine-hole course was promoted for the area, and was moved into the planning stages when pledges were promised by 25 prospective members who were expected to each pay a $25 annual membership fee. Ten quickly withdrew their offers, however, and the course was never constructed. The year was 1913.

Neville did not charge a fee for his work, and with the pipe costing $22,000 and the seed valued at $4,000, the course cost was completed for just over $100,000.

Motivated by his desire to move the California State Amateur Championship from its then-current location at Del Monte Golf Course to a site in Pebble Beach, Morse began researching course design and construction. After Morse reviewed at least six different completed plans for the possible course and traversed the property on horseback numerous times, the Pebble Beach Golf Links gradually came into form.

Legendary golf course architect Alister MacKenzie tees off at the sixth hole at Pebble Beach in 1928. MacKenzie; designer of Augusta National, Cypress Point and Paso Tiempo, also redesigned St. Andrews.

Morse hired Jack Neville, a former California State Amateur Champion and life-long golfer, to design and oversee construction of the course. At the time he was hired, Neville worked for Morse's Del Monte Properties Company as a real estate agent, where he again worked for many years after completing the Pebble Beach course.

After Morse reviewed at least six different completed plans for the possible course and traversed the property on horseback numerous times, the Pebble Beach Golf Links gradually came into form.

Accompanying Neville was Douglas Grant, also a former California State Amateur Champion. Grant had spent six years in Scotland studying bunker and green design and construction, and had accumulated a wealth of knowledge. Together, Neville and Grant began designing the course in 1916. Neville's eye for layout, coupled with Grant's study of bunkers and greens, yielded a course both spectacular and challenging.

Neville's golf experience enabled him to appreciate the natural contours of the land.

He surveyed the property for three weeks, walking the area regularly, and decided upon a plan that would take advantage of everything the dramatic space had to offer. He evaluated the existing hazards, including the beaches, the ocean inlets and the cliffs, intending to utilize them in his design. In an interview with "New Yorker" writer Herbert Warren Wind, Neville told him he had easily seen the course in the lay of the land.

Neville's design also called for small greens, creating an additional challenge but rewarding the golfer who had the ability to hit a tight target.

Morse approved the plans Neville presented to him without a single change, and construction began shortly after. Neville's design required minimal clearing, and he included a watering system to keep the fairways green and the course playable year-round. The sprinkler system was based on an innovative design created for the Del Monte Golf Course.

Neville did not charge a fee for his work, and with the pipe costing $22,000 and the seed valued at $4,000, the course cost was completed for just over $100,000!

In February, 1919, the Pebble Beach Golf Links opened to the public.

Since then, Pebble Beach has became famous the world over, and has been the scene of numerous notable tournaments.

The first of these was the 1929 U.S. Amateur Championship, which Pebble Beach hosted with great fanfare. Following World War II, the U.S. Amateur and the U.S. Women's Amateur were played at Pebble Beach, and the course has since hosted the U.S. Open and the PGA Championship. Bing Crosby brought his renowned pro-am tournament, then known as the "Clambake," to the course in 1947. Known later as the Crosby National Pro-Am, Crosby's tournament is today called the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

PGA stars to invade Del Monte Forest

By JERRY STEWART

A PLETHORA of PGA stars will invade the forest when the 52nd annual AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am tees off Feb. 4-7 at Pebble Beach Golf Links, Spyglass Hill and Poppy Hills.

Leading the charge is 1998 Vardon trophy winner David Duval, who recently captured the title at the Mercedes Championship in Hawaii.

Duval continued his winning ways last year, banking a record $2,591,031 en route to winning four PGA events.

With his showing at the Mercedes Championship, Duval should overtake a slumping Tiger Woods for the No. 1 spot in the World Ranking in the coming months.

Woods, who was expected to be paired with Michael Jordan before Jordan withdrew, said he will not decide whether he'll play in this year's tournament until Jan. 29, six days before the event.

Woods' non-committal stance may be attributed to his 1997 AT&T Pro-Am experience.

Paired with actor Kevin Costner, star-struck fans snapped and clicked their cameras through every shot of every round, creating a ruckus that would eventually lead tournament officials to ban cameras during tournament play.

Also returning is five-time AT&T Pro-Am champ Mark O'Meara, who may be more at home in Pebble Beach than the sea otters in Stillwater Cove.

Having won the Masters and British Open last year, the 41-year-old is proof that experience rather than youth is more of a factor in determining Tour success.

"If I'm going to have success, I couldn't ask for a better place to find it than Pebble Beach," said O'Meara after his 1997 win. "Somebody up there is looking after me."

Another player who enters the fray on a roll is Fiji-native Vijay Singh.

Singh, who claimed his first major at last year's PGA Championship in Washington, may even be hotter than Duval.

A wild-card entrant could be 39-year-old Fred Couples, who rarely plays in the AT&T Pro-Am but is looking to loosen up his chronically sore back by participating in more early season West Coast events.

A fan favorite due to his laid-back approach, Couples last played in the AT&T in 1984, finishing in a tie for third.

Defending champion Phil Mickelson also will be returning.

Last year Mickelson had to wait six months to capture the title due to the infamous "El Nino" weather system, which forced the tournament's final round to be played in August.

Mickelson's three-round total of 202 (14 under par) tied Cary Middlecoff's record for the lowest 54-hole score in tourney history and earned the southpaw the $550,000 winner's check.

Speaking of dough, players this year will be competing for a $2.8 million purse, with this year's winner receiving a check for $504,000.

Plus, the AT&T Pro-Am is part of the

PGA Tour's West Coast Swing, meaning that results will count in determining Bank of America's "King of the Swing."

Last year Mickelson earned a bonus $100,000 for his efforts in eight of the designated West Coast events.

Other players expected to make some noise include Paul Azinger, Justin Leonard, Davis Love III, Craig Stadler, Payne Stewart and Pebble's other prodigal son, Tom Watson.

In 1982 in the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, Watson made his "shot heard round the world" when he chipped in from the rough on Pebble's No. 17 hole, leading to an eventual 2-stroke victory over Jack Nicklaus.

Love III, who is fifth on the all-time money list, had 10 top-ten finishes last year and won the MCI Classic last April.

'If I'm going to have success, I couldn't ask for a better place to find it than Pebble Beach.'

— Mark O'Meara

Stewart meanwhile, finally awoke from his slumber at last year's U.S. Open at Olympic Club in San Francisco, holding the lead for three days before succumbing to a divot in the fairway and Lee Janzen.

One sleeper could be another member of the game's great youth movement, 28-year-old Jim Furyk.

Winner of the Las Vegas Invitational in October, the unorthodox-swinging Furyk finished only two strokes behind Mickelson last year and is considered one of the hottest players on Tour.

Azinger, who has made a remarkable recovery from cancer, Tom Pernice Jr. and Rocco Mediate could also quietly work their way towards the top of the leader board.

Conspicuously missing from this year's tournament will be Tom Lehman, who is recovering from shoulder surgery, and Nicklaus.

A three-time AT&T Pro-Am champ, the Golden Bear is currently hibernating while recuperating from hip replacement surgery.

The legend, who once said that "If I had only one round of golf left to play I'd play it at Pebble," is expected to return to one of his favorite venues when the U.S. Open tees off in June 2000.

Although Nicklaus will not be in attendance, his presence will still be felt.

Nicklaus helped redesign the 5th hole at Pebble, adding another ocean hole and making the masterpiece that much more grand.

Situated along the cliff-line, players will have to play a Nicklaus-fade to avoid the beach, but if "Crosby weather" shows up players may be forced to play a draw that starts directly over the ocean.

SAGA OF THE NEW 5TH — RICHEST FAIRWAY ON EARTH

By KIRSTIE WILDE

HOW DO you spend $3 million on construction of a single golf hole?

After all, it's just a long patch of grass with a few islands of sand and a little cup sunk into the ground at the end.

The saga of the 5th hole at Pebble Beach, begun more than eight decades ago, involves some of the highest-priced real estate in the world, a woman with no interest in selling it and a canyon that separates the tee from the green.

But the most formidable obstacle in the way of the new 5th, which is in play in this year's AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am for the first time, turned out to be an old oak tree.

DIGITAL PHOTO/PAUL MILLER

Pebble Beach Vice President of Golf Paul Spengler said he expects some of the pros to complain that the new 5th green is "too small." But they certainly won't complain about its scenery. In the background are the Pebble Beach Beach and Tennis Club and the Stillwater Cove pier.

More symbol than specimen

The controversy about the old oak, which was just one of more than a dozen oaks surrounding the property that eventually became the 5th hole, took on a life of its own in December 1997. It was initially stirred by an inaccurate news story in a San Francisco paper, and spread from one newspaper to another, to local TV, to the Associated Press and finally Cable News Network across the country.

"Mighty Fight Over 300-year Old Oak!" the headlines screamed. They said the tree was being "sacrificed" in a "woody nightmare" of "clear-cutting" by a company so ridden by debt that it is "spurring development" at the expense of the environment.

It made for a compelling story that reporters gobbled up like Christmas turkey.

The only problem with the stories was they weren't true.

In fact, charges of "clear cutting" were a joke because, while one large tree was to be cut, numerous other oaks were preserved in the construction of the hole and the "300-year old oak" turned out to be a cluster of five relative youngsters whose innards were so mushy from heart rot and oak root fungus that they couldn't be moved.

Last year, workmen got ready to move the mysterious cabin that hugged the cliff above Stillwater Cove for many years. The cabin had to make way for the new 5th fairway and is now used as a refreshment stand adjacent to the 10th hole.

Foundation, and at least four arborists and foresters before him, studied the cluster (which had fallen on its side in a storm years ago) and determined that it was not only pointless to try to save, but that it should be removed before the oak root fungus infected other very large live oak trees just a few yards away.

Perhaps the most compelling opinion came from arborist John Mote, who was offered up to $100,000 by the Pebble Beach Co. to move the old oak 20 yards out of the way of the green. Even though he stood to make a handsome pile of money in the contract, Mote wrote that evidence of "heart rot decay, possible decay of supporting roots and minimal vigor" precluded him from proceeding with the job.

The great oak tree controversy had very little to do with the actual specimen in question, and more to do with the symbolism of preserving all trees in Del Monte forest.

The plans for removing the oak and building the new 5th hole were reviewed by the Water Resources Agency, the Public Works Department, the Environmental Health Division, the Parks Department, the Monterey County Planning staff, the California Coastal Commission, the State Department of Fish and Game and the California Division of Forestry.

Are you beginning to understand how, around these parts, it's possible to spend $3 million on a single golf hole?

Pebble Beach Co. hired golf great Jack Nicklaus to redesign the 5th hole in the spot originally envisioned by Samuel F.B. Morse just after the turn of the century. Tom Watson, Tom Fazio and Johnny Miller lent Nicklaus their expertise on how to perfect it. (Miller was blunt about the old 5th: "The hole has been a nightmare," he said. "The move to the ocean is absolutely a godsend.")

Why didn't S.F.B. Morse just build the 5th hole along the ocean in the first place? After all, back in 1914 he controlled Del Monte Forest and had the vast, spectacular coastline as an untouched canvas on which to create the links.

The reason Morse had to hang a left turn after the 4th green and cut his 5th fairway inland is that there was a five-acre obstacle in the way, purchased by a man named Beatty who wanted to build a home on the majestic site, and wouldn't sell to Morse for less than $20,000.

Morse thought the price was akin to highway robbery. He might have fallen over in a faint if he knew how much the Pebble Beach Co. would eventually pay for the acreage 80 years later.

Morse tried to buy the five-acre piece again after World War II. By that time, it was owned by Mimi and Matthew Jenkins, who had built an ultra-modern home with square tubs in every bath and 16-foot windows in the living room to look out over Stillwater Cove and the great Pacific beyond. Mimi steadfastly refused offers by Morse. "Over my dead body," she reportedly vowed.

Mimi Jenkins passed away in 1995, and her heirs finally sold the property to the Pebble Beach Co. for $8.25 million. The Jenkins' "modern" house was demolished to make way for two new ones, on side-by-side lots then purchased by brokerage baron Charles Schwab and Don Lucas of the Lucas auto dealership group in the Bay Area.

A small log cabin on the property was picked up and rolled down the fairway to a new location five holes away. "We weren't required to preserve it, but we decided that it would be a nice addition to the 10th hole, where it will be used for food and beverage service," according to Rich Patterson of the Pebble Beach Co.

The only chapter left in the saga of the 5th hole was bridging the gap over the canyon that separated the championship tee and the green 187 yards away, and construction of the hole itself.

Details, details . . .

Some of the details of the project almost defy belief. The beautiful cypress wood which was to become the pedestrian and golf course bridge linking the 5th tee and its fairway traveled from one end of the continent to the other — twice.

First it was shipped from Alaska to Savannah, Georgia, to be fashioned into two impressive arcs. Those were then shipped to California last October, lowered into the canyon at Stillwater Cove by twin cranes and joined to make the final, $175,000 product: a mini-version of the historic Bixby Creek bridge on Highway 1 in Big Sur.

The Poa Annua grass that became the 5th hole green was pampered even more. R.J. Harper, director of golf at the Pebble Beach Co., described the odyssey of the lawn:

"We grew the grass on our sod farm near the 10th, from plugs taken during aeration of other greens. That way the new one will match the color and texture of the others exactly," he said. "Then we grew the green, cut it and rolled it, then sent it on refrigerated trucks to Palm Springs to be washed."

Come again?

Harper explained that the grass was treated to a kind of hydrojet massage in Palm Springs, so all but a quarter-inch of dirt was removed from the sod, leaving just the grass and nice, long roots. Then it was trucked (chilled, again) back to Pebble Beach where it was laid over perfectly sculpted terrain.

Meanwhile, the old 5th hole will become a wide grass boulevard for the galleries that follow the pros.

"This used to be a terrible bottleneck — there was hardly enough room for the fans and the golfers to walk," said Paul Leach, managing director of the Lone Cypress Co.

Is it worth every penny of the $3 million price tag? You can judge for yourself, because that view coveted by Sam Morse since 1914, and guarded by Mimi Jenkins for over half a century is now available to all at the AT&T Pro-Am.

Car 54, Where Are You?

By BEVERLY BORGMAN
First of Two Parts

"CAR 54, Where Are You?" That old TV sitcom comes to mind every time I think about Kathryn Crosby. The woman has virtually disappeared in the years since 1985, and I have this urge to get on the police radio and ask, "K.C., Where Are You?"

In case you've forgotten, 1985 was the last year of "the Crosby." In 1986 AT&T took over sponsorship, pushing Bing to second billing. There was no complaint from Bing; he'd been dead since 1977. Oh, but in a way there was. His lovely widow quickly withdrew the Crosby name from the event, stating that Bing had long ago instructed her to do so if the "clambake" went commercial.

Bing, as some of you may recall, had pretty strong opinions. One of them was that if his daughter ever lived with a man outside of wedlock, he would disown her. Another, apparently, had to do with corporate sponsors. Fortunately, perhaps, he lived to see neither.

So in 1986 Kathryn picked up all her marbles and, according to reports, declared she would start another Bing Crosby tournament on the other coast. If you weren't an avid reader of the local sports pages, you probably never heard any more about it.

Fortunately for the Monterey Peninsula, Kathryn's two sons, Nathaniel and Harry, decided to hang in here at Pebble Beach — which must have made for some chilly conversation at family dinners.

I have a soft spot in my heart for Kathryn. She seems to have taken some hard knocks from the media. It began, no doubt, when the aspiring young actress married the movie star who was 30 years older. It couldn't have helped that the public image of Bing was confused with his Oscar-winning portrayal of a priest!

A small source of embarrassment for Kathryn was when she attended her very first Crosby tournament in 1958, and right there on national TV she confused a tee with a green. Bing banished her to the Cypress Point clubhouse and told her to "keep a pot of tea going at all times."

After Bing's death, she suffered a good deal of public ridicule when she held an auction of his effects — what some unkind journalists referred to as a "garage sale."

"There were so many things to get rid of," she said at the time. "For instance, we had 14 desks." Musing about the adverse publicity, she said, "I think that the people who actually came to the auction were more understanding of what I was doing."

She cited a letter from people in Colorado Springs who said, "We have Bing's golf shoes over the bar in our game room." It pleased her that someone was enjoying them.

The "garage sale" clamor should have put her on guard. But Kathryn put her foot in it once again. In 1984 she got involved in an advertising campaign for a Bay Area carpet and drapery cleaning firm. Incredibly, the deal was: Hire us to clean your carpets, and you will receive a personal invitation to visit the Crosby mansion in Hillsborough.

When THOUSANDS of people responded to the offer, Hillsborough's city officials quickly vetoed the event, saying that such an operation would constitute doing business in an area zoned only for residential use.

Thwarted, the cleaning firm and Kathryn instead invited people to meet her at a local hotel and see a videotaped tour of the house.

Her side of the story

A few months later I found myself driving up to the electric gates of Kathryn's mansion. I don't remember how or why I was sent by my editor to interview her. Perhaps she simply wanted to tell her side of the story, and I was elected to write it.

A very formal gentleman opened the door and invited me into the library. Beautiful cabinetry reaching to the high ceiling held books and trophies. The draperies were heavy, the carpet white (and clean, of course). It was much as I imagined a film star's home to be.

Kathryn was also as expected — perfectly turned out in a mauve Ultrasuede suit, high heels and a scarf at her throat. However, the small gold pin holding the scarf in place spelled "Coit," the name of the drapery cleaners.

The first few minutes were a little tense, but once we started a tour of the house, she relaxed and fell into storytelling mode. She spoke of Bing's horses, Bob Hope's jokes, pointed out a montage of photographs. I got the feeling it was the same "tour" she'd done for the videotape.

In answer to my rather inane question, she said she didn't KNOW how many bathrooms the house had. She showed me what had been the children's rooms, the ongoing refurbishing of the dining room, the view of the rose garden in what had originally been the swimming pool.

(Common knowledge here on the Monterey Peninsula was that when Bing lived at Pebble Beach, he feared for his children's safety so near the ocean. It was one of the reasons he moved to Hillsborough where he did away with the swimming pool hazard by filling it with dirt and turning it into a garden.)

Kathryn took me into a cluttered den where she had spread out stacks of papers and pictures in anticipation of a second book on her husband. The first, "Bing and Other Things," had enjoyed modest success, but having been written by an adoring wife, it was understandably sanitized.

Finally, the question: Why had she participated in the drapery cleaning ad campaign? She laughed and said that even Bob Hope had phoned and asked if she needed the money.

She reminded me that after her marriage to Bing she had studied and become a registered nurse. "I also earned a teaching credential and taught for a short time. I've been a talk-show hostess and I've appeared in movies and plays. I'd be bored to death just sitting around the house."

Kathryn saw the affiliation with the cleaners merely as an extension of her working life, and added that the founder of the firm was a longtime friend.

She even managed to slip in a commercial, telling me that "if people will call Coit with a cleaning order and ask for Terry, they will receive a free copy of my book."

The next time

The next time I saw Kathryn was in January of 1985. She was busily preparing for the 44th Bing Crosby National Pro-Am. Dressed in casual red slacks, a simple blouse and flat shoes, she looked remarkably relaxed for such a human dynamo.

We were once again in the library of her 14,000-square foot-house, sipping tea and the conversation took a personal turn. I asked if there might be a new romance on the horizon.

Her answer was swift: "Romance? I don't need it! Women get romantically involved when they don't have enough to do." We left that subject behind.

"It will be a family party this year," she told me. Her daughter Mary Frances (remember the woman who killed J.R.?) would be coming with her husband from Los Angeles, and joining the boys in the annual affair.

Oozing enthusiasm for the tournament, she said, "To me, the Crosby is such a special memory of Bing. The people who take part are very like Bing. They like to have a good time, they're easy." (At the time of this interview, amateurs paid $1,500 to participate. This year the fee is $5,000.)

Kathryn Crosby was a winsome actress when she married Bing in 1957.

Asked about any participants who may have been a problem, she discreetly omitted names, but spoke of one guest who called room service at The Lodge one night and became quite "obstreperous. He wasn't asked back."

The last time I saw Kathryn was a week later at what would be the final "Crosby." She looked fit, happy and very attractive in a sporty plaid outfit.

Sightings

In the past 14 years I wrote several times to her Hillsborough address, but my letters came back unopened. Last year I heard that her mansion was to be used as a decorator "show house," a fund-raiser for the Coyote Point Museum. I phoned the museum and asked of her whereabouts and was told that she was living in Reno. RENO?

I wrote a brief note, addressed it to the museum and asked that it be forwarded. Again, no response. I even wrote to the personality column in Sunday's Parade magazine with the kind of "Where are they now?" question they often use. It was ignored.

As far as I can tell, Kathryn has not attended a single AT&T tournament. I've seen no mention of her in the social columns. One might assume that she has friends on the Monterey Peninsula whom she visits, but if so, they are mum as to her comings and goings. The woman seems to have disappeared.

K.C., WHERE ARE YOU???

NEXT WEEK: The telephone rings and a voice says, "Hello, Beverly. This is Kathryn Crosby."
